

Jeffrey M. Logan

Jeffrey M. Logan is the Executive Deputy Secretary for the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection. In this capacity, Jeffrey oversees the agency's business management functions encompassing budget, human resources, information technology, and laboratory testing. He was instrumental in formulating and executing agency strategies to improve operations and staff performance. Under his guidance, the department has achieved dramatic improvements in critical permit measures including review time, throughput and predictability. Jeffrey works closely with DEP's Oil and Gas program to maintain funding and a sustainable business model.

Jeffrey has extensive experience in construction management and business start-up. He was a founding member of a successful start-up medical rehabilitation company, Rehab Systems Company, developing seven new hospitals within a four year period, leading to a $120 million acquisition. Prior to this current position, Jeffrey was responsible for government relations and business development for Harris Corporation, an international communications and technology company.

Jeffrey holds a BS and an MBA from the Pennsylvania State University. As someone who is dedicated to protecting the environment and personal growth, he serves on the board of the Great Lakes Protection Fund and is the founder of DEP's future leaders program.
