

Lee Ilan is the Chief of Planning at the New York City Mayor's Office of Environmental Remediation, where she encourages cleanup and redevelopment of contaminated land. Her current efforts focus on community engagement, grant management, the SPEED environmental search portal, and intergovernmental issues. Previously, Lee worked as a commercial recycling consultant and as a parks advocate in New York City. She holds a BA in Political Science from Columbia.